

Earth Hour is an international WWF campaign to raise awareness and promote action on climate change.

This year the event takes place on 30th March from 8:30-9:30, where people switch off their lights to show their support.

We each have a chance to make a promise to our planet, changing one aspect of our daily lives to help protect our planet

Climate change is the biggest challenge we face as a generation.

We are the first generation that knows we are destroying the planet, and the last that can do anything about it.

Taking part in today's Earth Fair is a chance to see where you can reduce your emissions, waste, and energy use
